Sub-module 5: Marketing and Supply Chain for Managers
Module Introduction to marketing and industrial marketing

Johan Larsson, johan.larsson@ju.se

261013

Marketing defined

A social and managerial process by which individuals and groups obtain what they need and want through creating and exchanging products and value with others.

Needs - Defined:

A state of felt deprivation.
Include basic physical needs for food, clothes and safety, social needs such as affection and belonging, and individual needs such as knowledge and self-expression.

When a need is not satisfied a person will do one of two things:

1. Look for an object to satisfy it or
2. Try to reduce the need

Wants – Defined:

The form that a human need takes as shaped by culture and individual personality.

All persons have a limited number of basic needs but almost unlimited wants. Since we have limited resources this leads us to…

Demands – Defined:

Human wants that are backed by purchasing power.

People want to buy those things that give them the most satisfaction for their money.

When someone wants to buy something and has the money to buy it (purchasing power) demand for that product is established.

Industrial Marketing

- Marketing of goods and services to individuals and organizations for purposes other than personal consumption
- Called industrial, business-to-business, B-to-B, or B2B marketing

Differences in Consumer and Business Marketing

- Nature of markets
- Market demand – derived demand
- Buyer behavior
- Buyer-seller relationships
- Environmental influences
- Market strategy

Segmentation

To divide a market into distinct groups of buyers with different needs, characteristics or behaviors, who might require separate products or marketing mixes.

Six steps of market segmentation

JÖNKÖPING UNIVERSITY

Jönköping International Business School